Partners: None.

Additional Information: To recognize and reward achievements in sustainability, the City has instituted the Stamford Sustainability Scorecard now required as part of the city's zoning ordinance for all larger residential and commercial developments, redevelopment and conversions. Projects with at least 10 dwelling units and/or 10k sq. ft. or more, or, on lots where 20,000 sf or more are disturbed, must submit a completed Scorecard as part of the Land Use Bureau application review process. The Scorecard objectively measures a development's sustainability features by awarding points in categories such as energy use, landscaping, mobility, waste management, etc. The resulting grade must then be posted via a plaque in a conspicuous location of the property. A grade of B is equivalent to LEED Silver.
